What are missed calls really costing you?

Most local businesses miss 1 in 4 calls — nights, weekends, and any time you’re already on a job. Each one is a customer who calls the next name on the list. Fill in the math, then work down the checklist to plug the biggest leaks first.

The one-minute cost estimate

Calls you miss per week # / week

× Share that were real customers (est. 60–80%) %

× Average value of one new job/customer $

× 4.3 weeks = monthly

Estimated lost revenue / month $ _____

The 7 leaks to plug first

Check each one you have covered. Every empty box is money walking out the door.

- ☐ After-hours calls get a live answer. Voicemail converts at a fraction of a real conversation — most callers never leave one.
- ☐ Someone answers while you’re on a job. The second simultaneous call is the one you never even know rang.
- ☐ Every caller can book an appointment on the spot. “We’ll call you back” loses to the competitor who booked them now.
- ☐ You get a text/email summary of who called and why. So nothing slips and follow-up is instant.
- ☐ Spanish-speaking callers are handled. A hang-up over language is a lost customer in most CA markets.
- ☐ Spam and robocalls are screened out. So real customers never wait behind a “car warranty” call.
- ☐ Coverage costs the same whether you get 10 calls or 200. Per-minute plans punish you exactly when business is good.
